

Location of Non-denominational Adherents by Community Size

- Metros of 5,000,000 or more
- Metros of 1,000,000 to 4,999,999
- Metros of 250,000 to 999,999
- Metros under 250,000
- Micropolitan Areas
- Outside Metropolitan and Micropolitan Areas

The United States government defines both metropolitan and micropolitan areas for statistical purposes. Broadly, a metropolitan area is composed of counties associated with an urban core of at least 50,000 people. At the time of the 2010 census, metropolitan areas ranged in size from Carson City's 55,274 to New York City's 18,897,109. Micropolitan areas are composed of counties associated with smaller urban cores still having at least 10,000 people. Many counties are not associated with either metropolitan or micropolitan areas.

Location of Non-denominational Congregations by Community Type

- Metropolitan counties
- Micropolitan counties
- Other counties